

What people are saying about SOUL

"This program helped me examine my strengths and weaknesses as a leader and an initiator of action in my community."

"I have not spent much time thinking about forestry beyond the "forests". I now realize that trees and forestry in towns, communities and cities is just as important."

"The course opened my eyes to trees and paying attention to their health and their impact on our lives."

An Overview

- Are you passionate about trees?
- Are you interested in learning more about trees and tree care?
- Do you want to make a difference in your community?

The Vermont Urban and Community Forestry Program offers a course called Stewardship of the Urban Landscape (SOUL) that prepares participants to become stewards of the forest in which they live.

The program is designed for individuals who are interested in:

- Enhancing their understanding of trees and proper tree care.
- Becoming a part of a local, knowledgeable and energized cohort committed to improving their community's economic, social and environmental quality through trees.

Becoming a Vermont SOUL Tree Steward

To become a Vermont Tree Steward you must complete the eight-week SOUL course. In addition, you must complete 20 hours of volunteer service where you put your new skills to work improving your community's urban and community trees and forests.

Issued in furtherance of Cooperative Extension work, Acts of May 8 and June 30, 1914, in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture. University of Vermont Extension, Burlington, Vermont. University of Vermont Extension, and U.S. Department of Agriculture, cooperating, offer education and employment to everyone without regard to race, color, national origin, gender, religion, age, disability, political beliefs, sexual orientation, and marital or familial status.
